TOTAL POPULATION, INCREASE, AND DISTRIBUTION.

Population of the state.—Tennessee was admitted to the Union as the sixteenth state on June 1, 1796. According to the Fourteenth Census, taken as of January 1, 1920, its population is 2,337,885, which represents an increase of 153,096, or 7 per cent, over the 1910 figure. During the same period the population of the United States increased by 14.9 per cent. The following summary shows the population of Tennessee from 1790, the first Federal census year, to 1920, inclusive, together with the number and per cent of increase for each decade, in comparison with the per cent of increase for the United States as a whole:

Counties.—Tennessee has 95 counties, of which 58 show increases and 37 decreases as compared with 1910. (See Table 1.) In addition to the changes in county boundaries during the decade as indicated in the footnotes to Tables 1 and 2, there were numerous slight changes, of less than 1 square mile in area in each case and involving no transfer of population, which have been disregarded.

Density of population.—The total land area of the state is 41,687 square miles and the average number of persons to the square mile in 1920 is 56.1 (see Table 1); in 1910 and 1900 the averages were 52.4 and 48.5, respectively.

Minor civil divisions.—The political units into which counties are divided are collectively termed "minor civil divisions." The primary divisions of the counties of Tennessee are the civil districts, of which there are 1,208. There are also 236 secondary divisions, comprising 28 cities, 202 towns, and 6 villages. These secondary divisions usually form parts of their respective civil districts, but a city may be coextensive with the civil district in which it is located, as Chattanooga and Nashville, or it may include within its limits one or more districts and parts of others, as Knoxville and Memphis.

Cities.—Tennessee has 2 cities (Memphis and Nashville) which have more than 100,000 inhabitants and 2 (Knoxville and Chattanooga) which have between 50,000 and 100,000 inhabitants. Of the remaining municipalities in the state, Jackson city, with 18,360 inhabitants, and Johnson City town, with 12,442, are the only ones in which the population exceeds 10,000.

The following summary shows, for each municipality having 10,000 inhabitants or more in 1920, the population at each census for which figures are available, together with the increase during the preceding decade:

Urban and rural population.—The Census Bureau defines urban population as that residing in cities and other incorporated places having 2,500 inhabitants or more, and rural population as that residing outside such incorporated places.

The following summary presents, for the last three censuses, figures showing the urban and rural population of the state distributed among places grouped according to specified limits of population. The classification for each census is based upon the population of the various places as shown by the returns of that census. Consequently the territory comprised within any one class of cities or that designated as urban or as rural does not remain fixed, because any given place may, through the growth or decline of its population, pass from one class to another at successive censuses. The proportion of the population of Tennessee living in places of 2,500 or more increased from 16.2 per cent in 1900 to 20.2 per cent in 1910 and to 26.1 per cent in 1920.
